From their early years in the New York underground to their latter years as "Games Gods", Endless Games has been the leader in all arenas of entertainment.

While in art school, founder and front man Kevin "Lightning" McNulty discovered the unusually talented bass player Mike Gasser ("Mad Mike"). The two contrasting styles complimented one another perfectly, and Endless Games was formed.

Playing the underground circles, they developed a musical style known as much for its driving power chords and heavy bass lines, as they were for their front man's outrageous stage outfits and snowflake coif.

Their original drummer, Pete Worst, was replaced after their first album "Games Out of the Closet" (featuring all songs written by Kevin). Sixteen drummers later, the rhythmically impaired Brian Turtle signed on, and was immediately dubbed "Worse than Worst".

After a string of monumental albums like "Pomp My Hair", "Head Games", and the cult classic "Rollin' Dice With Transvestites", The band broke up over the personality clash between Kevin (always the artistic perfectionist) and Mike (always the political activist).

Despite recent reunion tours billed as "Pitiful" and "Pathetic", Endless Games will never stop rockin'!!

WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

KEVIN McNULTY

Now the Junior Republican Senator from Connecticut, he is famous in Washington for the personal attention he gives to each and every one of the twenty-two young interns that work on his staff. In addition he has recently championed legislation that requires all music recordings that do not play exclusively biblical or evangelical music to be sold in brown record liners and only to people of thirty-nine years of age or more.

MIKE GASSER

Moved to Montana where the locals call him "Mountain Mike". Most recent sightings of him placed him in Sasquatch territory running through the woods being chased by federal agents. He is known to be utterly reclusive and dedicated to the principles of his "Computer Fascist Manifesto" which he published in 1999.

BRIAN TURTLE

Never had a chance to be spoiled by years on the road. Today he is trying to build his own Bar Mitzvah and Wedding DJ business which he calls, "Brian's Song Inc." while working in a subsistence level job in the toy industry.
